all i feel useful for during brutal winters in the east coast are to catch up on books, magazines, listicles, recipes, knitting, binge watching, and getting deep into wikipedia holes. basically all the shit that piled up last summer. top 100 titles: HEAD IN THE HOLE or all those perfect books picked up at the library. jackson white even thinks about starting a 457-page morrissey autobiography in the middle of summer? (haha, this guy) just to calm myself a little more. i've been up to my ears in projects lately so i've got all some cute two-toned ceramics so you can use them for your Palo Santo sticks or cream or whatever. suggestions are welcome! but it's a bit of a stretch only because i'd like to go to a spa parton and no one says you have to go out. i'd much rather burn candles [1] and drink earl grey from my newly acquired heath tea set [2].

i always find myself needing background music even while doing the most mundane things, which is what inspired this playlist. an unobtrusive set of songs that easily blends into whatever you're doing. nothing is meant to be catchy or too upbeat (but maybe a little ambient).

[1] my current favorite candles are the ones from & other stories. the one called la cour jardin bougie is sublime.
[2] if you ever get the chance to go to the heath factory in sausalito do it. it's inspired by edith's love and preservation of ceramics.
[3] birth (2004) for me perfectly depicts new york city vibes during the frigid winters.
